TO THE SEARCHER

A recent article in the Indiana History Bulletin for December 1947, published by the Indiana Historical Bureau, Indianapolis, and quoted by permission, gives an excellent account of the status of the public domain in Indiana Territory, created May 7, 1800.

"Prior to 1800 the only land owned by individuals in Indiana was either in and around Vincennes, where titles went back to French and Indian grants, or in Clark's Grant opposite the present Louisville, which had been allotted to the men who had served with George Rogers Clark in his Revolutionary War campaign against the British.

"Indian title to all the lands in Indiana was recognized at least nominally by the Federal government; and before any particular area was opened for sale, negotiations were opened with the chiefs of the tribes that claimed the land. Treaties were made whereby the Indians gave up their claims and accepted goods and money in exchange. The negotiations might be prolonged, but in the end the government always won out.

"The first such treaty affecting Indiana land was held in 1795, when the Indians ceded lands east of a line drawn from Fort Recovery in Ohio to a point on the Ohio River opposite the mouth of the Kentucky River. A triangular strip in what is now southeastern Indiana was thus opened for settlement; but it was not until six years later after the land had been surveyed and a land office was opened at Cincinnati, that it could be purchased. In the meantime, many settlers moved in and 'squatted' on the land, hoping to purchase their preferred site when the area was opened for sale.

"During the first two decades of government land sales in Indiana, purchasers had to buy at least 320 acres and pay a minimum of $2.00 per acre. Four years were allowed in which to complete payments. Land auctions were held when new areas were opened, and the land was sold to the highest bidder. Any tracts not sold at auction could be purchased at the land office for the minimum price. Many purchasers were forced to forfeit their lands when hard times came and payments could not be made. In 1820 a new land law was passed which placed the minimum price at $1.25 an acre and allowed purchasers to buy as little as 80 acres. The credit system was abolished in favor of cash payments. At the auction sales, choice land often sold for three and four times the minimum price. In the 1830's and 1840's, pre-emption acts were passed by Congress to give the 'squatter' who had settled and improved a piece of land the opportunity to purchase it at the minimum price before the public sale.

"The rectangular system of land surveys was used for the first time in what is now Ohio in the 1790's. The system was conceived by Thomas Hutchins in 1764 while on an expedition against the Indians."

The tract books for the several land offices in Indiana are deposited in the office of the Auditor of State, Indianapolis, and are in the care of the State Land Clerk. Eventually, it is my plan to copy all of these records through 1851 according to the chronological opening of the various land offices. The date 1851 was chosen to supplement information in the 1850 Census.

This first book contains the records of the Cincinnati District. The area covered is mainly a district known as the "wedge" or "gore", located in the southeastern part of the state and bounded roughly by the Ohio-Indiana State Line, the Ohio River, and the Greenville Treaty Line. The territory comprises all of the present counties of Ohio, Dearborn, Union, and Wayne; most of Switzerland, Fayette, Franklin, and Randolph; and a tiny section of Jay. Some entries in the region are given in the Indianapolis District, to be copied later. See map on page 1.

There are in Indiana two Principal Meridians---the first at the Ohio-Indiana State Line at approximately 84 degrees and 49 minutes longitude, the second about two-thirds of the way across the state to the west at approximately 86 degrees and 28 minutes longitude. Most descriptions of land are given as ranges east or west of the 2nd P.M. The Base Line is located in the southern part of the state at approximately 38 degrees and 28 minutes latitude. Townships are north or south of the Base Line.

These records have been copied solely for genealogical purposes to enable a searcher to learn if an ancestor did locate in Indiana; if so, where and when. Consequently, to save time and space, I have omitted giving the acreage and the final certificate numbers. Reference to my page 1 will, except in the case of fractional sections, give the acreage; and if anyone particularly cares for the final certificate number, he would probably want a signed letter from the Bureau of Land Management in Washington, D.C.

The land records for Indiana have never been published, copied, nor indexed by names. Therefore, they have been completely useless to searchers unless they knew the exact, or at least a close approximate, location of the land on which they suspected ancestors might have settled.

Since the 1820 Census is the first for Indiana, these records will, in a way, serve as a substitute for earlier censuses. The fact that a person entered land, however, does not necessarily mean that he ever actually lived on it. Also, some "squatter" residents may never have bought their land before they migrated to other places.

In copying the records, I have done so exactly as they appear in the originals---by location. By this, searchers may be able to identify other members of the family from nearby entries made by people of the same surname; also there is the possibility of a clue to neighboring families into which daughters might have married.

The searcher is warned against assuming, without other proof, that Sr. and Jr. necessarily mean father and son. In the early days, this often literally meant the "elder" and the "younger"---sometimes a man and his nephew, occasionally two unrelated men of the same name, coincidentally. A given name or middle name resembling a surname does not always positively indicate a relationship to that family. Children were often given the name of a neighbor. Of course, such names as George Washington Brown and Lorenzo Dow Green are self-explanatory!

The records of the Cincinnati District are contained in two books which I have called Volume I and Volume II. The earliest entries are on April 9, 1801, and the latest on August 1, 1840.

Volume I, the older, is unbound and is in very bad condition. The pages are brittle, and the ink is faded---in some places illegible. The handwriting is excellent, in the main. When a man relinquished his entry (did not complete his payments), a red R was placed beside his name; and the name of the later purchaser is also sometimes given. For example: "Powell Scott, NE $\frac{1}{4}$ -S6-T14N-R14E of 2nd P.M.; 4-2-1817. Rel.W $\frac{1}{2}$. To Jacob Deboy, 9-20-1827." Interpreted, this means that on April 2, 1817, Scott entered (started paying on) the NE $\frac{1}{4}$, etc.; that he later relinquished his entry (stopped paying); and that on September 20, 1827, the W $\frac{1}{2}$ -NE $\frac{1}{4}$ was resold to Jacob Deboy. The R (for relinquished) does not always indicate whether the man gave up all of his land or only part; reference must be made to the same site in Volume II to see if anyone else bought the unmentioned part---in the above case, the E $\frac{1}{2}$ -NE $\frac{1}{4}$. Sometimes, a man later bought back all or part of what he had previously relinquished.

Volume II is largely a repetition of Volume I. In order to avoid copying the same names twice, I had to correlate the two volumes and copy them simultaneously. Volume II differs from Volume I in that: (a) it does not give the names of men who relinquished land, and these therefore are found only in Volume I; (b) it gives later entries; and (c) it gives the final certificate numbers.

Many discrepancies will be noted, particularly in names but sometimes in the descriptions. I have called attention to these but would not attempt to explain them except that in certain cases, I think that the Register copied part of a name from the line above or the line below. These discrepancies could probably be ironed out by writing the Bureau of Land Management.

The whimsical spelling of the two Registers has been given exactly as it appears. In the text itself, I have included all middle names and initials. However, in the index, to save space, I have used only the first name with the assumption that most men were called by it. If the searcher suspects that his ancestor might have used his middle name (and this is especially true of Germans), it would be wise to look up all given names listed under a surname.

In the index, I have occasionally made an attempt to standardize the spelling to make the names more easily found. I have also combined similar-sounding names such as Meyer-Meier-Myers. However, my interpretation of the handwriting, particularly in Volume II, may be faulty; so the searcher is advised to "look around" the alphabet. Names beginning with L-S-T, for instance, look much alike in some script. Also, remember that German names were often spelled interchangeably: B-P, C-G, C-K, D-T, F-P, F-V, K-N, S-Z.

Some years ago, an abstractor who was working in the records labeled the county names on the original pages. I have copied these in my text, but I do not guarantee their accuracy. He did not label Ohio County, which was cut from the lower part of Dearborn County. The sections in Ohio County are very fractional because of the two rivers; but from an atlas, I have determined as best I can that Ohio County contains the following:

T 3 N, R 1 W	Sec. 1-11, 15-22
T 4 N, R 1 W	Sec. 7-10, 14-23, 25-36
T 3 N, R 2 W	Sec. 1-24
T 4 N, R 2 W	Sec. 21-36
T 4 N, R 3 W	Sec. 1-5, 8-24
T 5 N, R 3 W	Sec. 36

Abbreviations used are:

T township	P.M. Principal Meridian
R range	Rel. relinquished
S section, south	Fr. fractional
N north	pt. part
E east	cor. corner
W west

Errata. After page 55, I numbered the next stencil page 57. I did not discover this error until page 82. To correct this, I numbered the next page 82a, thus making page 83 and the following pages in their correct sequence. Names are indexed accordingly.
